In all of the teaching positions listed above, I have supervised students in law school clinics involving the representation of children. In addition, I have been responsible, singly and with others, for the development and teaching of the courses' seminar components, which have combined lawyering, ethics, and various legal topics involving children's rights.

As Director of the Ronald A. Peterson Law Clinic at Seattle University, I was responsible for the administration of a program which offers clinical courses in 8 to 12 different subjects to between 100 to 150 students each year.

I have also personally represented many clients in trial and appellate courts, including the Illinois Supreme Court, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court.
